

Pitcher's Mounds?

A Stuarts Draft group is trying to bring baseball back to this abandoned field. The Diamond Club arranged to receive fill dirt from local excavation projects to raise the field four feet to improve its drainage. Club president Orvin Kiser said the club is open to anyone interested in restoring the field, seen here from behind "home plate." So far, the Draft community has donated time, materials, equipment and money, Kiser said, and donated funds will be matched by the county's parks and recreation commission. The field should be ready for practices next spring, and will eventually have a grass infield, bleachers and a press box.
